

Andria Castellanos named one of NYC's 2023 "Notable Leaders in Health Care"

Crain's New York Business recently featured one of our VNS Health team members, Andria Castellanos, executive vice president and chief of provider services in their "Notable 2023 Leaders in Health Care" list. Andria is one of 84 honorees on the list who are recognized for their commitment, innovation, and vision towards addressing health disparities and serving the needs of overlooked populations. Crain's describes the individuals as "truly exceptional—and their work is vital to the functioning of the city's health care system and the city itself."

Crain's notes how Andria supports VNS Health in delivering quality, accessible, and cost-effective home care to patients. She leads many of VNS Health's care teams, promotes diversity within VNS Health, and provides career-development opportunities for experienced clinicians as well as mentorship for newer nurses through the organization's nurse residency program. The publication says "Castellanos uses her strategic vision and operational management knowledge to improve the organization's services."
